Where: 111 E 48th St, New York, NY 10017

What: CyberTouch Touch Wall - Invidia 3x3 55 Landscape

Built in 1926 on land owned by the Vanderbilt Family, The Barclay was a luxury hotel, known to be elegant, glamorous and popular among New York's glitterati. It was home to many famous personalities including Ernest Hemingway, Marlon Brando and many others. As in any residence, whether permanent or temporary, technology plays an important role in providing a comfortable, enjoyable yet practical space to call home. The Vanderbilt Penthouse is no exception and in keeping with the luxury and grandeur of the space, the technology in the penthouse provides guests with an equally unforgettable experience. The massive 150" diagonal video wall in the living room provides guests with the ability to watch their favorite entertainment, connect to the internet, listen to music, watch their local laptop displayed on the giant screen and even connect to remote locations via video, should they require it. With such extensive capabilities, providing a simple control interface for users was critical. To achieve that goal, CyberTouch's interactive control surface was installed. The touch wall allows a user to control the features of the system through simple touch gestures on the display.
